

It is the unknown we fear when we look upon death, and nothing more.

I enjoyed the meetings, too. It was like having fun.

Hermione was screaming again: the scream went through Harry like physical pain.

He lay face down, listening to the music. He was perfectly alone. Nobody was watching. Nobody else was there. He was not perfectly sure that he was there himself.